

Good morning Year 6!

What a gloriously sunny day!... (notice my excellent use of an adverb! ;-))

Well I have to say, it was very strange without you all at school yesterday - I really missed you!

Hope yesterday was productive and you got started on some evacuation research, and maybe started your letter! Due to the prime minister asking people not to leave the house unless it's for a short period of exercise, you may not get to post your letter. Don't fret, pop it in an envelope and deliver it yourself... to the kitchen! Ha ha! See what you can do, but be sensible. :-)
Don't forget, when you think you've finished, proofread it for errors (punctuation and spelling etc.) and then edit: how can you improve the content? How can you turn some of your compound sentences into complex ones? Remember the subordinate clause song? I'll send it to you so you can teach your household and have a karaoke session in the lounge!

I'm not going to set you any new work today, as you've got a fair bit to get on with, however, I shall add something different tomorrow. By the way... did you spot my 'deliberate' mistake in message to you yesterday? If you spotted it, give yourself a million team points and pat on the back! Ha ha!! :-) Even teachers miss things sometimes!

Whilst you are researching, answering questions or writing today, why not put on a bit of WWII music. Try:

<https://youtu.be/4b6DgeTf1BE> We've had this on in class when we were doing our WWII paintings! Don't forget to put on 'We'll meet again' <https://youtu.be/OJKMji2688M> (how relevant!) and 'Run, rabbit, run!' <https://youtu.be/LoLchtG8vTk> and sing along with some real umph(!) with a hairbrush in your hand! No cheese sandwiches please, must be steak baguettes! :-)

A tip: dance around the room with someone in the instrumental section of 'Run, rabbit, run!' Ha ha!!

Anyway, have fun and I'll leave with these:

Why can't you have an all chicken football team? There'll be too many 'fowls!'

Why don't oysters share their pearls? Because they're 'selfish!'

My first time on an escalator was up-lifting, but the second time was a let-down!

Ha ha ha ha ha!!! Sorry! :-)

Have a good day!

God bless,
Mr Hill
